Reagan won't delay aid Americans have serious doubts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan conceded Tuesday the American people have serious doubts about giving $100 million to Nicaraguan guerrillas, but said he would reject any effort to water down the aid proposal by "temporizing and quibbling."

"To delay or reduce the aid we have requested for the freedom fighters could be to send too little too late," Reagan told out-of-town reporters in a question-and-answer session at the White House.

"Those who would compromise must not compromise the freedom fighters' lives nor their immediate defensive needs," he said. "They must not compromise Latin America's democracies or our own southern borders. They must not compromise freedom."

Asked whether the American public had fallen in line behind his program, Reagan said, "No, they haven't, and our own polls indicate there is a great feeling of people saying, 'What are we doing in this little country?'"

An ABC News poll released last Friday showed that three-fifths of Americans believe congress should reject Reagan's request.

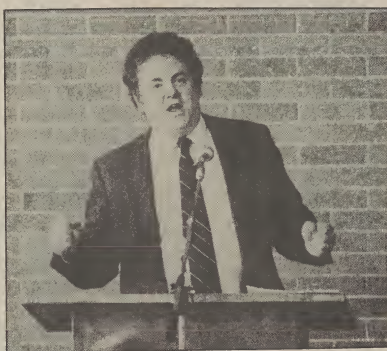

Fifty-nine percent of the 543 people surveyed by telephone said congress should say no to the $100 million aid package, while 34 percent supported it. "We haven't completed the job of letting the American people know all the facts," Reagan said. This is one of the reasons, the president said, why he plans to make a nationally broadcast speech on the issue Sunday night, three days before a vote by the U.S. House of Representatives is tentatively scheduled.

"In the last few days here in Washington there has been talk of compromise on this issue: smaller amounts of aid, delay in providing it, restrictions on the uses to which it could be put, all the usual temporizing and quibbles," Reagan said.

The president was asked specifically about a compromise plan, suggested by Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., calling for congress to approve the aid but withhold any of it for six months as an inducement to Nicaragua's Marxist-led government to negotiate for peace.

"I will listen to any proposal that anyone wants to make that is tied to the idea of letting us come to the aid of these Contras, but the only proposal of that kind that I have heard was one that involved a long period of time and was not a sure thing, but they would then vote again to see whether we could have the money and use it," he said.

Rule change cleans up elections

By VICKI OLTROGGE
Universe Staff Writer

Last year at election time, when the campus was littered with bright signs and huge banners, seven of the nine presidential teams had violated election laws before they were even nominated.

In contrast, this year the campus shows no signs of the usual election hoopla and the violations have been drastically reduced.

"The graphics and early campaigning rule changes have eliminated 90 percent of the violations," said Mike O'Neill, ASBYU attorney general. "O'Neill said there have been 'very few elections violations this year and the violations have been minor and settled out of court.'"

The elections committee chairman, Andrew McDonald said the committee is taking a risk by reducing the number of graphics campaigners can use because the posters and other paraphernalia used for campaigning serve as publicity for the elections.

"It's a risk but we're hoping that by making it more low keyed and intelligent, voter turn-out won't be down," said McDonald.

The strict graphics rules will be carried over into the nominations convention this year, said McDonald.

The nominations convention is today at 11 a.m. in the ELWC Garden Court.

"If signs were used at the nominations convention, they would have a tendency to work their way across campus, detouring around each building," said McDonald.

McDonald said anything the candidates want to use in the convention will have to be approved by the elections committee.

The nominations convention will be run the same as last year's, said McDonald.

"It's a risk but we're hoping that by making it more low keyed and intelligent, voter turn-out won't be down."

— Andrew McDonald
election committee chairman

The allotted time for nominations of each candidate is one minute and the candidates will each have two minutes to accept the nomination.

There are currently 15 presidential teams and a total of 48 candidates running in this year's election.

Write-in candidates will be allotted time at the convention if they wish.

On Thursday morning the booths for every candidate, except write-in candidates, will be set up in the ELWC Memorial Lounge.

"This election will be 'fair, equitable and dull,'" said McDonald.

Gas prices predicted to drop

VALERIE SEELY
Universe Staff Writer

Gasoline prices continue to fall and consumers will enjoy the ride down into the 70 cent range, according to economists' predictions.

Although the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) is begging for help as it tries to maintain its market share after collapse in December, other oil producing countries intend to ride price down to below $10 a barrel, said Dr. Bruce Zmijew, professor of economics at BYU.

Zmijew drew a comparison between the price in the 1970's and its fall during the first part of this year.

Before the gas crunch, we used to drag main for gas because gas was only 35 cents a gallon," he said. "At that time, oil was $2 a barrel; then OPEC discovered its marketing power and the price quadrupled and prices at the pump doubled.

"We were lucky that OPEC oil only accounted for 30 percent of our oil, or the price could have gone up even more," Kimzey said.

Over the years, as OPEC's attitude, "We'll deal on our terms" continued to raise oil prices, people found alternatives to oil and gasoline, Kimzey said. "They bought small cars and began to carpool to conserve energy."

During the price hikes, other oil sources were found in Great Britain and Norway. The supply increased and the demand was down, so OPEC decided to cut production in order to keep prices up.

Kimzey said Saudi Arabia took most of the cuts and was tired of other OPEC countries not cutting as much. The country decided it could make more money by producing more and selling at lower prices than by not producing to keep the price up and then not selling because of high prices.

"It was expected that prices would drop in the spring after the winter heating demand was gone, although Saudi Arabia's announcement came last fall," Kimzey said.

However, he cited the relatively mild winter in this area as reason for the price drop coming earlier than economists had predicted. Pump prices are expected to dip below Tuesday's 79-cent price at some Provo stations, and settle at 75 cents a gallon, Kimzey said.

In 1980, OPEC was charging $36 for a barrel of crude and pump prices reflected $1.20 a gallon," Kimzey said.

In December, a barrel of oil was down to $26. It was $15 in early February and dropped to $12.25 two weeks ago.

Kimzey predicted a dip to below $10 and said Great Britain vowed to ride the price down as low as it could.

BYU student wins award from TIME

RACHEL COLLIER
City Editor

After receiving national recognition for excellence in football and duty pageants, BYU is being recognized for excellence in academics service.

TIME magazine chose Ken Kendrick, a junior honors student in Seattle, Wash., majoring in political science and communications, as one of the top college juniors in the country in their nationwide "search excellence."

Kendrick is one of very few winners from the Intermountain West and the only one from Utah. He is sponsored by Ted Lyon, chairman of the Spanish and Portuguese department and 94-85 honors professor of the year. TIME initiated the search last fall in attempt to recognize the achievements of the nation's top college students. This was done in conjunction with TIME's fifteenth anniversary and "to emphasize TIME's belief in individual excellence," according to Brian Brown, TIME spokesman. To be recognized, the students had to excel not only in academics, but also in some activity outside the classroom.

TIME recognized Kuykendall for his outstanding community service. Besides maintaining a high GPA, Kuykendall is involved in many major community service projects.

In conjunction with his award, Kuykendall is going on a five-day trip to New York City where he will be recognized at a banquet in the World Trade Center. He will also meet the editor-in-chief of TIME magazine and representatives from several large companies, including American Express, IBM and Procter and Gamble.

His trip is sponsored by the Honors Department and the BYU Admissions Office. The Admissions Office is involved because they are always trying to enroll outstanding students and may be able to attract more if potential students see BYU receiving this kind of recognition, Kuykendall said.

He hopes this trip will help him get interviews for an internship this summer. He is also looking forward to meeting the other award winners.

"I'd really like to see what all these other students are like," he said.

Eventually, Kuykendall would like to attend Yale law school and become a lawyer of the people.

"I think there are a lot of poor, handicapped, immigrant, and other people who are intimidated by the whole legal process," he said. "I'd like to be able to offer them free legal advice and assistance."

Kuykendall said "I'd like to be some kind of 'legal Robin Hood,' making corporations pay through the nose for services from this Yale educated lawyer, then giving the same services to those people in need for absolutely nothing."

He hopes the contacts he makes through traveling to New York and winning this award will help him further this goal.

Canyon highway 'one of deadliest' of Utah's heavily traveled roads

By ED WRIGHT
Senior Reporter

Although state highway 189 in Provo Canyon is one of the busiest — and one of the deadliest — two lane highways in the state, a verbal agreement between many different public service agencies provides emergency service to motorists and residents alike.

Despite past misunderstandings over territory between the agencies involved, "Provo Canyon has as good emergency coverage as anywhere," says Utah County Sheriff Dave Bateman.

Bateman said Provo City has entered an agreement with Utah County to provide fire and ambulance service in all but a small portion of the canyon. Orem had covered the highway to the first diversion dam but, in a new agreement between the two cities, now responds as far as the Claimjumper Steak House.

Even though there have been past territorial disputes, Provo City Fire Chief Boyd Carter says Orem and Provo work well together in covering the canyon. This quick, professional service has saved many lives on a highway that was not designed to facilitate the heavy interstate traffic it now carries.

According to Utah Department of Transportation (UDOT) figures, the highway carries almost 10,000 vehicles per day. The road through the canyon, begun as a toll path for cattle and wagons in 1857 and upgraded to a 35 mile rural highway in the 1930s, has seen little improvement in design since the early 1940s. The large number of vehicles, coupled with the poor road have taken a deadly toll of human life.

The so called "Utah death strip" on I-15 near Levan has a fatality rating of 1.6 persons per million vehicle miles traveled. U-189 in Provo Canyon has a rating of 8 deaths per million miles traveled according to UDOT figures.

In a three year period, the Utah Highway Patrol reported more than 248 serious accidents. The 13.6 mile stretch of highway from the mouth of the canyon to Walsburg has, in the words of a Heber resident, "tragically affected many people."

Lew Jackson, a school teacher at Wasatch High School says, "Everybody in this community (is) being affected by that road. Either people (know) someone or they (have) had a member of their family injured or killed in the canyon."

The state recognized the problem some time ago but met resistance when it announced plans to upgrade the road. Joel S. Hall, design engineer for the current Provo Canyon project says initial state plans were delayed when "citizens groups" in the canyon voiced opposition. The most famous being Robert Redford's group. The state plans called for a four lane highway. Hall said he was surprised when he read a national tabloid magazine that claimed Redford had stopped a 'six lane super-highway through the pristine canyon.

Many of the accidents in Provo Canyon in recent years have been caused by out of control semi-trailer trucks.

The State recently completed the first and second segments of the highway. It doesn't plan to begin the next phase, widening the highway to the Sundance Turnoff, for several years.

Since the first opposition to the highway project and the first organized group to pressure the state, the measure would require their opinions, a new factor has entered into the picture — semi-trucks.

One official said he is concerned with the trucks and what they are hauling. Semi-trucks carrying everything from turkeys to dynamite clog the narrow winding canyon leading to points in the west. Many of these trucks have been involved, or have caused fatal accidents in the canyon says the Highway Patrol.

"We have a truck problem in this area but I don't know if it can be solved," says Carter.

Provo S/D discusses new laws

The Provo School District Board of Education met Tuesday night to discuss the importance of legal bills, update and develop new guidelines for the education of children infected with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome virus and discuss the incorporation of Martin Luther King Holiday into their proposed calendar for the 86-87 school year.

SB65 exempting the clergy from having to report child abuse cases does not include teachers. Teachers are to report cases immediately to their school workers who in turn will report the information to the proper authorities.

HB205 requiring the educator to report student drug abuse to parents, SB17 declaring Martin Luther King's birthday a state holiday on March 19th and HB114 requiring superintendents of school districts to meet high qualifications were among the legislative bills discussed.

Dr. Joe Miner, Director of Utah County Health Department presented a review of information on AIDS. "We aren't immune from the problem, we do have AIDS in Utah County," said Miner.

Miner told the board the State gives the local Health Department authority to include or exclude students from school for health reasons. The recent AIDS-related deaths of two Utah children have made many requests for clarification of policies regarding school attendance of children with the disease.

The Board of Education concluded it will cooperate with other agencies in educating its residents, patrons and selected students about the disease and the risks or lack of risks of transmission. Infected school age children, when first reported, will be placed on an alternative study program subject to review and evaluation by a team made up of the patient's doctor, the parents and other appointed authorities.

Kremlin says staff cut is illegitimate demand

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin countered a U.S. order to cut Soviet staff at the United Nations with an official protest Tuesday, warning Washington that its "illegitimate demand" could jeopardize U.S.-Soviet relations and the next summit.

The official news agency Tass distributed a text of Moscow's protest to the United States. Parts of it were read on Radio Moscow.

The protest accuses the United States of violating international agreements on the United Nations, headquartering in New York, and denies U.S. accusations that spies are among the Soviets' 275 U.N. employees.

Foreign Ministry officials called the U.S. Embassy Tuesday morning and asked for a meeting, where the oral protest was delivered to Charge d'Affaires Richard Combs, according to embassy spokesman Mark Smith.

Combs is the top-ranking U.S. diplomat in Moscow while Ambassador Arthur Hartman is on vacation.

The U.S. government on Friday ordered the Soviet Union to cut its U.N. staff to 170 over the next two years, a 38 percent reduction. The order termed the number of Soviet staff "unreasonably high" and said it poses "a threat to U.S. national security."

The Soviet protest statement appeared to warn America that such behavior threatens the next superpower summit meeting.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President Reagan met in Geneva last November and agreed to a second summit this year in Washington.

"The U.S. administration must be aware that such actions increase distrust of its policy and by no means create a favorable background for a summit meeting," the statement said.

The U.S. side has proposed a June meeting, but Gorbachev suggested last month in a speech at the 27th Communist Party Congress that no date will be agreed upon unless progress is made on a nuclear test ban or an agreement to scrap medium-range missiles in Europe.

Officers capture inmates in fourth escape attempt

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah (AP) — Utah State Prison officers captured three inmates who had tied up guards and taken their keys, and a prison spokesman said it was the fourth escape thwarted in five months.

"I think it's important the public understand the kind of situation our officers are being asked to face. It isn't anything we're going to totally stop," said spokesman Juan Benavidez.

The inmates, armed with knives and baseball bats, let themselves out of Unit One, a minimum- and medium-security facility, with the stolen keys early Tuesday. The three bound officers were also robbed but were not harmed, Benavidez said.

Two of the men were spotted crossing a canal on prison property by tower guards about 3:30 a.m., and all three were apprehended within half an hour, Benavidez said.

"We had a potentially dangerous situation that came off all right, in large part due to the alert response of officers," he said.

Unit One, a dormitory-like building with virtually no locks, houses 420 inmates and normally has four officers on duty at night. However, one had called in sick Monday night, Benavidez said.

Alpine considers year-round school

The Alpine School Board met Tuesday night to discuss several concerns to district patrons, one of which was the proposed Extended Year program for Orchard Elementary School and recognition of a group of outstanding students.

Orchard Elementary School is one of several schools in the Alpine District to propose the extended year system of education for relieving overcrowded classroom problems.

Orchard elementary has prepared an extensive study on the advantages and disadvantages of year round education, which they presented to the board Tuesday night. The board discussed the proposal, but no decisions have been made. The district

Orem man arrested, charged with burglaries

Orem police arrested a 20-year-old Orem man Tuesday and charged him with the burglary of items valued near $300 from six businesses last weekend.

The burglaries occurred last weekend at two business complexes located at 1156 and 1160 So.

The three captured inmates were identified by Benavidez as Mark D. Neal, 22, serving five years to life for aggravated robbery, Pablo Paul Jr., 20, serving one year for auto burglary and David D. Bennett, 30, serving five to life for aggravated sexual assault. All three men are from Salt Lake City.

New tornado patterns concern weathermen

WASHINGTON (AP) — With spring come tornadoes.

This year, weather watchers and emergency service workers are eyeing the onset of tornado season warily, recalling the last two years when twisters brought devastation far from the usual Midwestern "tornado alley."

Twisters in the Carolinas two years ago, and in Ohio and Pennsylvania last year, claimed dozens of lives in a pair of violent outbreaks that left hundreds injured and millions in damage in their wakes.

Those storms helped remind Americans that tornadoes pose a threat in every state, not just that famous tornado alley stretching from Nebraska south through Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, where they are traditionally most common.

This year's first tornado struck Feb. 2, leaving what government meteorologists termed considerable damage in the vicinity of Mineral Wells, Texas.

On Monday, at least 20 tornadoes sliced through Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky, killing six people and injuring 70 more.

Tornadoes are the offspring of changing weather. The warmth that replaces winter cold can spawn twisters, making the violent storms most common as spring arrives across the nation.

Indians confront state on boundary argument

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Representatives from a number of Indian tribes met here Tuesday to discuss the Ute Indians' legal battle to assert jurisdiction over extended boundaries of their eastern Utah reservation.

The Indians were called together by singing and the beating of drums in a conference room of the Sheraton Hotel. The gathering was closed to the public and press.

"We're here to find out what the issues are and what to do about them. It's something that can affect all tribes," said John J. D'Onofrio, an attorney for the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe.

A ruling by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeal on Sept. 17, 1985, reaffirmed extended boundaries of the reservation which the Utes have always claimed. But the decision left unresolved many questions about the parameters of the tribe's territorial powers, said Ute tribal attorney Martin Seneca.

The state, Duchesne and Uintah counties and the cities of Duchesne and Roosevelt want the U.S. Supreme Court to review the 10th Circuit decision.

The state also has asked members of the Utah congressional delegation to introduce legislation that would limit the tribe's jurisdiction, Seneca said.

Since the latest court decision, both the tribe and the government have maintained the status quo with regard to powers over such things as mineral and hunting rights.

In eastern Utah cities and towns, officials are concerned about how being located on a reservation would change their prospects and the quality of life.

recently held a literature, music and art contest entitled, "From Liberties View." The board recognized those students who had excelled in the contest. Board President R. Sudweeks and Superintendent C.L. Cox presented the students with certificates and blue ribbons at the board meeting.

Also discussed at the meeting, was the re-establishment of Elementary school boundaries, to include a new elementary school to open this fall.

The school board members made special tribute to their patrons who have donated time and money for the improvements of the schools in the district.

"I don't think our schools could function without donations made by our PTA's," said Sudweeks.

State street in Orem.

According to Orem Public Information Officer Gerald Nielsen, a burglar entered six businesses. They included Vista Enterprises, Home Health, NI America and IRA Mountain Land Realty.

Items stolen were: a small jewelry box, a briefcase, stamps, a tape recorder and $20 cash. Orem policemen working with Provo and Ogden Police, arrested the man Tuesday about noon at his Orem apartment.

Police said the man would be held for investigation of the burglaries. Nielsen said the suspect may be responsible for the weekend burglaries and others.

Provo postpones parking proposal

By MARY M. KUNZ
Universe Staff Writer

Parking problems in Provo persist. The Provo City Council Tuesday voted to postpone the adoption of a new ordinance that would allow customers and clients of downtown businesses to park in designated areas for an unlimited amount of time.

Parking postponed
The motion was postponed for one week after two Provo businessmen protested, saying the ordinance needed more discussion and clarification. Donn Claybaugh, vice president of Von Curtis Academy of Hair Design, objected to the new restrictions that would force students attending college in downtown Provo to park outside a restricted area, that being reserved for downtown shoppers. "Students are just as much customers as others who shop at City Drug or any other downtown stores. I would like to see definition of 'customers' not to exclude students. They should be treated differently, as if they were second class citizens," he said.

Petition of support
Seventy-six downtown businessmen signed a petition supporting the new ordinance. The proposal would allow customers and clients of downtown businesses to park in designated areas for an unlimited time. Previously parking was limited to one-hour time.

The area restricted for 'downtown customers-only' includes Center Street from 100 East to 400 West, University Avenue from Center Street to 200 North, 100 West between Center Street and 100 North and in the public parking lot on the north west corner of University Avenue and Center St. Jim Perry, a member of the six-member parking committee and a local business owner said, "Everything that happens is supposed to go through the parking committee." The meeting, which will include law enforcement officers, is planned for early next week.

Unanimous agreement
Council members unanimously agreed to the postponement. "We have had this problem for 30 years," said Charles A. Henson, a councilman. "One more week won't make any difference."

Orem turns out to debate zoning

A rezoning issue commanded applause from the opposing and supporting parties which filled Orem City Council Chambers to overflowing capacities Tuesday. It was scheduled to be continued April 22.

The area under consideration, 1200 South to 1400 South from Main Street to 500 West in Orem, is presently zoned as transitional in the city's Master Plan. A transitional zone can be rezoned as either residential or commercial and citizens supporting both actions were present.

One resident, Kent Jackson, indicated the rezoning problem is an ongoing one. Jackson said he had been to similar hearings three times in the past three years. "I'm tired of appearing to protect my property," said Jackson.

One of the proposal's supporters, John Cross of Orem, said, "I'm not mad; I'm not opposed to the redevelopment." Cross said if the proposal passes, he wants his property included in the zone.

Representing the 400 families that have students at Westmore elementary was Laura Blanchard. Blanchard said 271 individuals have signed a petition objecting to the zone change. "Our residential zone is not protected legally."

Ron Hatfield, a resident in the proposed area, said he is concerned about the safety of his children and he suggested the council exercise caution to provide a buffer-zone in order to protect the remaining residential areas.

Image of nursing careers continues to gain prestige

By REBECCA BURGOWNE
Universe Staff Writer

At a local hospital recently, a post-operative patient casually mentioned a slight pain in the right side of her chest. The nurse, who was well-educated, immediately recognized a possible blood clot in the lungs and began treatment procedures before informing the patient's physician. Her quick action saved the patient's life.

Ten years ago, only the physician would have been allowed to do this, not the nurse. With the changes and progress in modern technology and health care, however, the roles and responsibilities in nursing have changed dramatically. The dated stereotype of nurses as deliverers of hypodermic needles and bedpans has been replaced with that of a professional who must have extensive knowledge and skill to monitor and make critical life and death decisions. Dr. Lana Riddle, director of the nursing clinic at the BYU Comprehensive Clinic, said that the setting at the clinic is completely different than it was five years ago. "The focus now is more on health teaching and counseling."

In order to facilitate preventive medicine, nurses have become more involved in health care policy making. Carolyn Melby, an instructor in the College of Nursing at BYU, is working to integrate health care policy in the nursing industry.

Concerns about health care financing, health care laws and the fact that nurses are not often heard, requires nurses to be more involved in the legislative and policy making aspects of nursing, she said.

Nurse practitioners can become experts in their field of interest, be it pediatrics, psychiatry or midwifery. These changes and breakthroughs are requiring skilled and qualified managers. Dr. Leslee S. Boes, assistant dean of the College of Nursing, said health care facilities all over the United States have a desperate need for managers with a nursing background to manage the complexities of the health care system.

Batman faces middle age in new book

NEW YORK (AP) — A new Batman has hit the bookstores — a cynical, middle-aged warrior who, with a female Robin at his side, leaves retirement to lash out at the disintegration of law and order in Gotham City.

"The Dark Knight Returns" is not like most comic books. Its printing is deluxe, its artwork complex, and its mood nightmarish and somber. At its heart is a 50-year-old Caped Crusader who battles his own dark side.

"I try to show him as a very angry, frustrated, obsessive man. Very righteous," said Frank Miller, the 29-year-old mastermind of the new Batman.

"The Dark Knight Returns" is a four-part miniseries; it will not replace the original Batman pulp comic books, which continue to show the debonair, young millionaire Bruce Wayne in his ward, Dick Grayson, fighting crime in Gotham as they have since their first appearance in May 1939.

But while those books sell for 75 cents apiece at newsstands, "The Dark Knight Returns" is sold only at book and specialty stores and costs $2.95. The cover is a stark silhouette of Batman, lit by a bolt of lightning.

"It kind of announces to the world that this is not a typical comic book," said Dennis O'Neil, senior editor at DC Comics, publisher of Batman.

It is, instead, a graphic novel, a "thought-provoking action story" produced by one of a new breed of comic artists who take the medium seriously, and use it to tell serious stories.

But Batman's not a young man any longer; he is not sure of his physical abilities, and a night of crime fighting leaves him aching all over.

Composer, inventor creates unique 'musical science'

By POLLY PARKINSON
Universe Staff Writer

A collaborator in the invention of a new musical instrument — the Synclavier — will perform on his unique digital synthesizer tonight at 8 in the Madison Recital Hall, HFAC.

Jon Appleton, a composer, performer, author and Professor of Music at Dartmouth College, will demonstrate his electroacoustic music as part of BYU's Performing Arts Series.

A long collaboration between Appleton and engineers Sydney Alonso and Cameron Jones began in 1973 and culminated in the invention of the Synclavier. Appleton continues to compose for this instrument and has appeared in concert across the United States, Europe, Japan and New Zealand.

"Most composers know the instruments they are using, and these instruments dictate sounds that will be composed," said Appleton. "I choose a sound I want and create the instrument's timbre. Then I think of a sound that will complement it, or how I can develop that sound and transform it into something else."

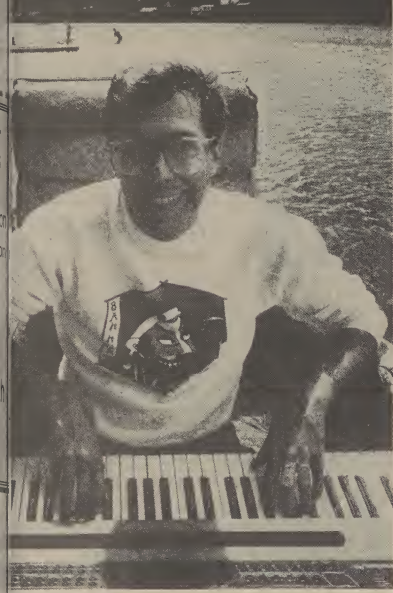

Appleton composes both electroacoustic and instrumental music, and has been recognized with Fulbright, Guggenheim and American-Scandinavian Foundation fellowships.

Most computer music is composed by people who specialize in computers rather than music, said Appleton. "It has become a scientist's dream of what music is supposed to be rather than the emotional expression of an artist."

The program for Appleton's performance includes "Saehasonjin," which was the first work composed for the Synclavier II Digital Synthesizer. The piece uses entirely synthesized sounds and moves from traditional to altered timbres.

Also on the program are "Bombay," a short work using the recorded sounds of tambura, sitar and tabla celebrating the Year of India; "Digitaru Ongaku," meaning 'digital song' in Japanese and composed for the Festival of Future Arts in Tokyo; and "A Swedish Love Song," composed this year for voice and Synclavier.

The concert will conclude with "Brush Canyon" and "Duo for Oscar," "Brush Canyon" is a new work combining sampled and synthesized sounds. The duo is for piano and Synclavier, and the performer alternates between the two instruments. It uses many gestures from the 19th century concerto, but with altered timbres.

Lady statue's arm, head misplaced for 100 years

NEW YORK (A.P.) — Lady liberty may have seemed the embodiment of perfection to generations of immigrants, but engineers working on the statue's renovation have found that her head and right arm have been out of place for 100 years.

Edward Cohen, head of Ammann and Whitney, which is managing the restoration, said the head and the arm holding the torch are both 18 inches to the right and forward of how they were placed in Gustave Eiffel's original design for the iron frame. It is not clear why the arm and head were misplaced, Cohen said. It may have been for aesthetic reasons, or perhaps the statue's copper skin did not fit correctly and the inner structure was moved slightly so it would fit.

Today's thought

The test of our progress is not whether we add more to the abundance of those who have much; it is whether we provide enough for those who have too little.

All-American team announced

Chatman receives honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Berry, the leading scorer and rebounder for Big East conference tournament champion St. John's, was the only unanimous selection on the 1985-86 Associated Press Division I All-American college basketball team which was announced Tuesday.

The 6-foot-8 junior who played center for the 30-4 Redmen this season was joined on the first team by seniors Len Bias of Maryland, Kenny Walker of Kentucky, Johnny Dawkins of Duke and Indiana junior Steve Alford.

The only BYU player to make the All-American team was Jeff Chatman who was given honorable mention honors. The 6-6 sophomore was the leading scorer for BYU averaging 17.7 points a game.

Honorable mention honors were given to BYU's Jeff Chatman. Chatman also received honors as a member of the first-team All-District 7 and second-team All-WAC. The 6-foot-6 sophomore from Talladega, Ala. was the top-scorer for the Cougars averaging almost 18 points a game and was accompanied by Dave Felt and Juden Smith from Texas-El Paso, Fennis Dembo from Wyoming, Johnny Brown from New Mexico, Jerry Stroman from Utah, Rick Strong from Colorado State and Anthony Watson from San Diego State.

A panel of 10 sportswriters and broadcasters comprised the selection committee. There are no repeaters from last year's first team. Bias, Walker and Dawkins were second team selections last year.

The second team was comprised of 6-11 sophomore forward Danny Manning of Kansas and four seniors — 6-4 guard Dell Curry of Virginia Tech; 6-11 center Brad Daugherty of North Carolina; 6-6 forward Ron Harper of Miami of Ohio and 6-1 guard Scott Skiles of Michigan State.

The third team consisted of two seniors — Michigan's 6-11 center Roy Tarpley and Mark Price, Georgia Tech's 6-0 guard. The others were juniors — 7-0 center William Bedford of Memphis State, David Robinson, 6-11 Navy center and Syracuse 6-2 guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington.

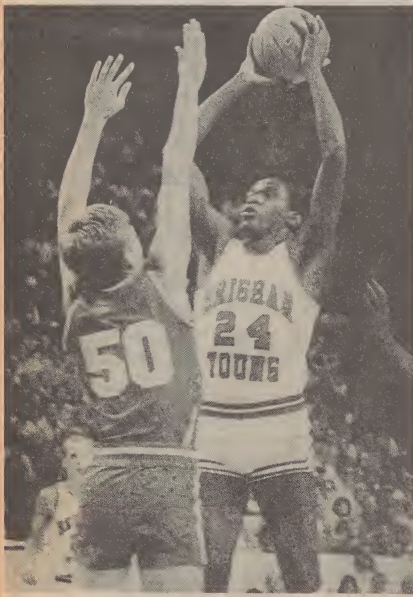

Berry, who played in the shadow of All-American Chris Mullin at St. John's last season, moved from forward to center this season. He averaged 22.9 points and 11.3 rebounds despite facing double and triple coverage most of the season.

Berry used his great leaping ability, unorthodox style and soft left-handed touch to lead the Big East in scoring. He made 60 percent of his field-goal attempts and holds the school record for total points in a season and blocked shots.

He was named winner of the John Wooden Award Sunday, one of the sport's honors as college basketball's top player.

"He's so cunning inside it's incredible," said Villanova coach Rollie Massimino. "His style is so different. I don't know, maybe the only way to stop him is to break his arm."

Bias, the AP's unanimous choice as Atlantic Coast Conference's Player of the Year, averaged 22.9 points on 55 percent shooting from the field and 86 percent from the free-throw line.

3 grapplers qualify for championships

BYU's lightweight wrestlers Brad Gustafson, Chris Brown and Morgan Woodhouse will travel to Iowa City, Iowa to participate in the NCAA Wrestling Championships which begin Thursday.

The three Cougars qualified for the meet by virtue of their performances this season and in the recent Western Athletic Conference championships. They hope to become BYU's first All-American wrestlers since 1973.

Gustafson, a 126-pound senior from Saratoga, Calif., is ranked eighth by National Mat News and is 14th in Amateur Wrestling News.

In addition to these rankings, Gustafson holds a season record of 27-7 and has held Outstanding Wrestler titles at two invitational this season.

Cougar Chris Brown, 118-pound junior from Delta, finished third in the WAC and received a wildcard bid to the NCAA championships. Brown's 30-6 record has led him to a 19th place ranking by NMN and 20th on the AWN list.

BYU's Morgan Woodhouse, a 142-pound senior from Orem, is ranked 14th by NMN and 19th by AWN. The former WAC champion has a 26-9-1 record.

Dantley wants retraction of discipline statement

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Adrian Dantley, who told reporters earlier that he might speak out on Wednesday about disciplinary action taken against him by Utah Jazz Coach Frank Layden, now says he probably won't.

Dantley told club spokesman Bill Kneifeldt on Tuesday that since Wednesday is a game day, he planned to delay any announcement until Thursday.

"He is waiting for his agent, David Falk," who is based in Washington, D.C., Kneifeldt said. "He said everybody will know."

Layden, who sent Dantley home after a locker-room spat in Phoenix, announced Monday that Dantley would be fined $3 and said he considered the matter settled.

But Dantley, saying his "name has been made like mud all over the country," said he wanted to meet with

THE LIVING SCRIPTURES

Service is life's key, says Elder Hanks

By BARBARA ARMSTRONG
Universe Staff Writer

Students and faculty were admonished Tuesday to follow Christ, live pure lives, speak truth and right wrong.

Elder Marion D. Hanks, a member of the First Presidency of the First Quorum of Seventy of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, gave the advice at this week's devotional address at the Marriott Center.

Patterning lives

According to Elder Hanks, service is the key to patterning our lives after Christ. He told of his young grandchild, who being sick in the night, asked Grandpa for help. After cleaning up the mess and putting the grandchild and his sibling back to bed, Elder Hanks said he went to bed delighted.

Learn love

"On serving and being served you really do learn to be in love. I am delighted in being able to serve," he said.

Elder Hanks told of a major league baseball player who had great potential for success, but is no longer playing the game because of cocaine addiction.

"I cannot help but wonder what he wished for and dreamed of during his quiet hours. I doubt he dreamed or wished for the position of failure that he is in now," said Elder Hanks. "Did he dream of being of service to his fellow man?"

Daily efforts

Dreams, wishes and desires, said Elder Hanks, do not matter and they don't take us to achievement. He said what will be achieved comes from day by day effort.

He reminded the audience of a story that was in the news last week — a school teacher had sent $200 to a school as payment for supplies he had taken while employed there. "He sent in the $200 because at this point in his life he looks back and is sick at heart that he could steal anything," he said.

On living pure lives, Elder Hanks reminisced about a missionary he once counseled. After making some mistakes a few years before, the missionary had set goals for living a pure life. The missionary told of a ward dance where he had made some "immoral gestures" to a young lady and the next day apologized to her. She asked him, "Do you know what the priesthood means? Does the priesthood mean anything to you?"

"I cannot help but wonder what he wished for and dreamed of during his quiet hours. I doubt he dreamed or wished for the position of failure that he is in now. Did he dream of being of service to his fellow man?"

— Elder Marion D. Hanks

The young man told Elder Hanks that on that day he made up his mind to honor his priesthood and the responsibility that he was given.

Ramises II lecture synthesis of a life

By DONNA R. KELLY
Universe Staff Writer

Hugh Nibley, a leading LDS scholar, will sum up 25 years of intensive research on ancient Egypt during the final Ramesses II International Lectures Series at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Marriott Center.

Professor emeritus of ancient studies at BYU, Nibley is a world-renowned authority on ancient history, culture, religions and languages.

"This is a nice opportunity for the local community to hear Nibley present his synthesis of a lifetime of scholarship," said Spencer Palmer, a BYU professor of comparative world religions.

The Kennedy Center arranged the three Ramesses II lectures; Nibley's lecture, which is the last of the series, is entitled, "The Greatness of Egypt."

Nibley retired as a professor of ancient scripture in 1975, but has remained very active in the scholarly world and still goes to his office in the Harold B. Lee Library almost daily. He has published more than 150 books and articles, including "The World and the Prophets" and "An Approach to the Book of Mormon". Truman G. Madsen, professor of philosophy at BYU, described Nibley as a "terrifying teacher." "He does not lecture; he explodes," he said.

Nibley is well remembered for an unorthodox commencement speech he gave where he described the graduates robes as "the black robes of a false priesthood." In the same speech, he criticized the business world for managing people into mediocrity rather than leading and inspiring them.

A native of Portland, Ore., Nibley graduated with highest honors from UCLA in 1934 with a bachelor's degree in history and classics. In 1938, he received his doctorate in Arabic from the University of California at Berkeley.

After serving as a member of the U.S. Army intelligence during World War II, Nibley joined the BYU faculty as an associate professor of history and religion.

Fluent in many languages, including French, German, Spanish, Russian, Icelandic, Coptic, Aramaic, Sanskrit and Babylonian, he is considered one of the world's leading authorities on ancient Egyptian.

Teachers blind on school laws

By LINDA SHELTON
Universe Staff Writer

Most teachers in American public schools are not well-informed when it comes to knowing their legal rights, liabilities and obligations, says Roy Windstead Jr., a North Carolina educator.

Windstead, who recently received a doctorate from Brigham Young University, says 3,000 teachers face law suits each year, because they do not know their legal responsibilities.

Windstead has developed a legal handbook to benefit teachers. "If teachers knew their rights and legal responsibilities, they could avoid most of the potential problems of facing litigation. Teachers definitely need to have access to readable sources of information pertaining to school law," he says.

In his research, Windstead discovered that most of the blame for teachers' ignorance in school law falls on the shoulders of teacher training programs in the nation's colleges and universities.

"The courses just aren't there," he says. "But as pressure mounts for this need, institutions of higher learning must provide this material in a general sense because failure to do so would ill-prepare the potential teacher, especially in the most vulnerable early years in the classroom."

The guide book includes comprehensive information on such topics as child abuse and neglect, compensation and benefits, copyright law, curriculum, educational malpractice, employment status, equal employment opportunity, non-school activities, supervision, teaching, working conditions, evictions, grievance procedures, health examinations and work load.

Government gives AFTS extra time

The American Fork Training School (AFTS) has been granted an extension from the federal government to prepare a plan that will correct its deficiencies, according to Ron Liston, the assistant superintendent of AFTS.

Deadline extension

"The feds have given us an extension until March 14 to submit a workable plan of correction. We are currently working on that plan and every indication which we have received is that this plan will be acceptable," said Liston.

Violations

The deficiencies which the federal government cited were for human rights violations, active treatment violations and life safety violations, according to Paul Greenberg, program specialist with the Dept. of Health and Human Services.

In an interview last month, Greenberg said, "They definitely have their work cut out for them. . . I don't think they are going to make it by that deadline."

According to Liston, "We are putting the finishing touches on the plan and it will be submitted on time."

Jeremiah Dandoy, the superintendent of AFTS, was away on vacation, and therefore was not available for comment.

Twain made fun of LDS as did contemporaries

By VALERIE SEELY
Universe Staff Writer

Through the humorous writings of Mark Twain, a whole nation was gung up on the Mormons and that atmosphere gave momentum to legislation which violated the constitutional rights of a people. "Humorists use all they can to make the people laugh," said Richard H. Cracroft, Dean of the College of Humanities, in a lecture Tuesday to the Utah Valley Chapter of the Utah State Historical Society.

Under the pen name Mark Twain, Samuel Clemens reflected the culture and the time, but it was not his personal grudge against the Mormons, Cracroft said.

"Twain based his writings on his own unsettled attitude about religion," Cracroft said. "He didn't just mock the Mormons; he treated all scripture in a less than reverent manner."

Cracroft said Twain drew from Artemus Ward, recognizing the comedy possibilities of polygamy. Ward was famous for exaggerations such as saying it took Brigham Young six weeks to kiss his wives and discussing the confusion of many mothers-in-law.

Twain followed that with a quote of Brigham in a supposed visit with a "Gentile Johnson," as to the merits of a small family: "Take my advice, young man, ten or eleven wives is all you need; never go over it."

Twain said the danger of sleeping with "72 wives in one large bedstead is that they all snore at once."

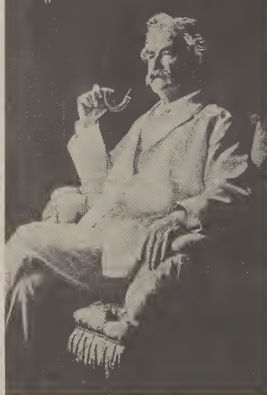

In 1861, when Clemens accompanied his brother Orion, a newly appointed secretary to the governor of the Nevada Territory, they were received in Utah as government officials by Brigham Young.

Twain's pen retold the story in his book Roughing It, which was published in 1872. Cracroft said. Six chapters and two appendices were dedicated to Mormons.

In one chapter Twain comments on the "Mormon Bible" which he called "chloroform in print." He said it was indeed a miracle that Joe Smith could write the whole thing without falling asleep.

However, Twain admitted to fictionalizing his encounters with the Mormons. Cracroft reported a letter in which Twain had asked his brother to help him remember the trip which took place ten years before the book was written.

Another supposed comment from Brigham

SAMUEL CLEMENS is MARK TWAIN

Young concerning his large family was that "every kid on the street calls me pa."

Twain commented on the reform groups which were sent to save young children, especially the Young children, from hell.

He said the perception was either a serious backslashing on the wickedness and sin of Mormons, or a humorous tale that pulled apart inconsistencies or poked fun at the beliefs and practices, but was usually negative.

"No one tried to understand," Cracroft said. "We were a people on the dove complexion of America that everyone had to squeeze," he said.

The way literary figures viewed the Mormons may have had some effect on the legislation that gave Mormons such a tough row to hoe in the 1800's, Cracroft said, pointing out that Mormons practiced polygamy for 50 years before anything was done about it.

Speaking of today, Cracroft said modern Mormons can laugh at the humor of Twain because "we no longer identify with polygamy. We don't get defensive the way some religions might who still practice polygamy."

Cracroft said modern Mormons just don't know how to take (Mark Twain as a whole). "He does make bad remarks about our beliefs, scriptures, and leaders, but he does it so well," Cracroft said.
